PENN TEAM WAS NOT PHYSICALLY FIT FOR BATTLE WITH TEAM OF OREGON CALIBER

OREGON DESERVES CREDIT FOR CLEAN-CUT VICTORY OVER PENN, BUT CONDITION DECIDED GAME

Crumbling of Red and Blue Line and Lack of Power in Backfield in Second Half Were Outstanding Features

BY ALL the laws of good sportsmanship we should be extending congratulations to the University of Oregon football eleven for its surprising and element victory over Bob Folwell's Ponn team. We do congratulate Oregon for its splendid performance; but after carefully reading the detailed description of the game, one cannot fail to recognize the fact that Penn lacked the physical condition necessary for a grueling battle. Couch Folwell and Captain Mathews declared before the game that the Red and Bine team was in perfect shape and ready for a grueling battle, but before yesterday's battle was long under way b was apparent that Folwell's men had lost the snap and dash so notlevable in their play during the last few weeks of the regular season. Penn weakened gradually after the first few minutes of play and was worn down by the heavier and better conditioned Oregon eleven. There is no question about Oregon's strength, and Bezdek deserves great credit for the brilliant victory; but it did not heat the same Penn team that gave such a dazzling exhibition against Cornell on Thanks-

Condition Decided Issue

PAR be it from us to pull the "blold-you-so" stuff, but perhaps the reader will recall that early last week we stated that unless Oregon was greatly overrated Penn was due for a trouncing. In this article, for the writing of which we were childed by other critics, it was stated that Fenn's chance for victory depended upon its ability to get the jump on Oregon and take the fight out of the Pacific coast eleven by piling up an early lead. It also was said that Penn probably would not feel the lack of condition until the last half of the maste. Such was the case. The Red and Blue outplayed Oregon early in the game, and had several opportunities to score, but the "punch" was missing. Late in the game the superior physical condition of the Oregonians was apparent, and the heavy backs fore the heretofore invincible Penn line to ribbons. The heat teams in the East were unable to make an impression on Penn's line during the season and it is not reasonable to suppose that Oregon, with an old-fashioned style of straight plunges into the line, could gain so easily if the Red and Blue team

Mistake to Arrange Game

THE game may be considered a great ruccess from a Penn standpoint, when the size of the receipts is considered, but it cost the Red and Blue quite a lot of prestige. The primary object of the game was to swell the recents of the football season, and in this respect it was a success. It is doubtful, however, if the football committee will permit another Penn team to take the pourney across the continent for a game unless arrangements can be made to give the men more time on the Coast for practice. Penn was not able to not much work price to the game, but probably would not have availed itself of the opportunity if it had been on the seems of battle earlier. Folwell merely made the mistake of mis judging the condition of his men. He thought they were right because they looked just as well as they did during the season, but he failed to allow for the lack of stamina due to breaking training and the absence of strenuous work to bring the men back to form.

Army and Navy Recruiting Athletes

ATHLETIC authorities at West Point and Annapolis are warried over the publicity given the scramble of the two teams for promising athletes, now attending other colleges. According to the story the Army was constratulating itself upon lining up Hathaway, captain elect of the University of Indiana football team, for an appointment, and was of the opinion that "Chick" Harley, the wonderful Ohio halfback, also would enter West Point next year. It is said that certain persons at Annapolis who did not approve of the corralling of Oliphant and Vidal by the Army then arranged to get an appointment for Corey, Nebraska's captain, and McCreight, the Washington and Jefferson fullback. To go the Army one better the Navy is said to have made overtures to Harley and that the All-American back is considering Annapolis in proference to West Point.

Circumstances Alter Case

SHOULD this system of inducing athletic talent to enter Uncle Sam's two institutions be permitted? This is a question that is being discussed by high college athletic authorities. If a college used the same methods, it is certain that it would be criticized severely; but, odd as it may seem, every one appears to approve of the actions of the Army and Navy. In one way it is an excellent idea. It will bring into the two branches of the service athletes of wonderful power, physique and nerve, and at this time they are needed badly. It will also serve to place Uncle Sam's two institutions in the front rank in athletics. All of the players mentioned are stars of the first water in more than one branch, and their presence on the two teams would make the annual football, baseball and basketball games between the two institutions of higher standard.

Darcy Putting It Over on Public

TES DARCY has decided to go into vandeville before fighting a single bout. The Australian has signed a contract, but no one appears to know just how long he will be tied up with this work. It is the old, old game of stinging the public, and it is hoped that the venture proves a frest. If Darcy would prove to the public that he is the wonderful fighter Tex Richard and a few other premoters tell us he is, then he would be welcome to whatever he can get out of vaudeville; but what assurance have we that he is not another Bill Squires or n Dave Smith? Wonderful as is the record made by Darey against American boxers in Australia, it is no more impressive than the ones toled to this country by Squires. and Smith. Fistic fans may recall the great excitement created by the arrival of Bill Squires in this country many years ano. Squires was a heavyweight who was billed as the coming champion of the world, and when he arrived in this country the newspapers and fight fans were even more enthusiastic than they are about Darcy at the present time.

Tommy Burns Stopped Squires

BILL SQUIRES'S first fight was with Tommy Burns, who knocked him out in one round. This got to be a favorite trick for Burns. He knocked the Australian out in Australia and again in Paris just to prove that lds victory was not a fluke; Old Jack "Twin" Sufficient stopped Squires in nineteen rounds; Jim Flynn turned the trick in eight rounds at Bakersfield, and Bill Lang, who was a mark for every first-class American heavyweight, knocked him out three successive times. Such was the record of a heavyweight who had knocked out ten straight opponents, five of them in one round, against American Oghierz. He was boosted just as strongly as Darcy is at the present time. Dave Smith, another Australian, was greeted with as much bluster as Darcy, and he followed in Squires's footsteps. Eddie McGoorty toppled him over in his first appearance against a high-class American boxer and then repeated the trick. After that Smith was easy for any one. Before getting excited about Darcy, remember Squires and Smith! Let Darcy show something in the way of boxing before passing him

THE death of Eddle Doheny, former Glant and Pittsburgh pitcher, in the Mayfield State Aslyum recalls to mind the wonderful come-back this sterling southpaw made back in 1900. Doheny was as wild as Cy Morgan and was pronounced a failure with the Glants. He was traded to Pittsburgh and in 1981 was one of the leading pitchers of the National League. Doheny worried over the illness of his wife and his mind became unbalanced. He was still a young man when he was confined to the Mayfield Asylum and the career of one of the most romising pitchers in the game was cut short. Doheny was one of the hardest hitting pitchers the game has produced.

ONE day, after Ed Walsh announced that his arm was in first-class shape and that he would be able to take his regular turn on the mound for the White Box, Manager Clarence Rowland notified the famous spit-ball pitcher of his unconditional release. The passing of Walsh several years before his time is one of baseball's tragedies. Walsh pitched his arm off to win a fortune for Owner Charley Comiskey and suddenly went to pieces. The score has been evened, however, as Comiskey carried Walsh for four years at an enormous salary, despite the fact that Ed was not in shape to pitch. Comiskey's loyalty won him thousands of friends in Chicago.

FRED MITCHELL, the Cubs' new manager, declares that the West Point team of 1916 was the fastest aggregation afoot he has seen during his baseball career. Mitchell says that as a team the cadets were faster on their feet then the Glants of 1911, 1912 and 1913. McGraw's three-time penmant winners were considered the fastest aggregation of runners in modern baseball. The former Harvard coach says there was a wealth of promising material at West Point last spring and that one or two of the cadets would develop into major league stars with the proper schooling.

WHATS a little thing like age to an athiste? We now have William Letts, a seventy-five-year-old ice skater, more than a half century a star at this apart, heating his thirty-five-year-old son, who is a title holder up in New Jersey, in a half-mile race at St. Nichelas Rink in New York recently, in time that means no disgrace to any skater.
